Program: “PHAC Healthy-Breast Care Program”

Program Summary:

Paul Hom Asian Clinic is a UC Davis student run clinic that provides free and comprehensive healthcare to the underserved Asian population of Sacramento. We understand that factors such as low income, language barriers, and limited health education prevent our female patients from receiving education, screening, and diagnostics on breast cancer. Thus, we formed a committee devoted to registering, screening, and educating economically-disadvantaged female patients over the age of 40 on breast health. The mammogram committee in PHAC strives to offer mammogram screenings at least four times a year, screen twenty-five patients per event, and guarantee annual mammograms for our patients. We also attend health-related public events to promote breast cancer awareness and educate the general public and our patients on the importance of cancer detection. Patients who receive questionable or abnormal mammography results are referred to qualified health care organizations to receive follow up diagnostics and care. Our interpreters are with our patients through every step of the process.
